

ANALYST EXPERIENCE- PEOPLE STORY: SUNNY

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

My name is Sunny. My pronouns are she/her and I'm a consulting development analyst. I was born in Singapore. When I was 11 years old. My parents made a decision to move the family over to Australia. As a child, I was really exposed to a lot of different forms of art and culture. Just to be open and experience new things, it really did instil a love and appreciation of expressing myself and having a go. Even if you might not be the best at everything.

I really enjoy coming to work every day and knowing that I will truly make an impact. We work really closely with a lot of government clients in the social policy and program delivery space so that it's a lot of different things, a lot of different moving parts at once, but it's always never a dull one.

It's incredibly important to be able to come into work every day and feel that you can really be your authentic self. It's a really strong inclusion and diversity pillar within Accenture. The Pride Working Group meets fortnightly, putting on events to learn from each other and better represent the community within Accenture. I really do feel that Accenture provides a place in which I can thrive. Nurturing your passions and where your interests are, whether it's intellectually or personally in so many different ways.
