

ANALYST EXPERIENCE- PEOPLE STORY: CHELSEA

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

My name is Chelsea. My pronouns are she/her. I am in the Salesforce practice and I am a business integration analyst. I grew up in a single parent family. Seeing my father having to work long hours and all the struggles that he had to go through, really motivated myself to be the best version of me and do what I love and it will lead you somewhere.

If I were to describe my role, I'm a functional consultant/part time wannabe developer. You get to design things, you get to talk to clients, talk to your team and bring solutions to life, which is one of the things that I love about technology. I love the fact that I can work with people from all walks of life.

Everybody has a back story. Everybody has their own path with different experiences, different age gap, and I get to learn from them. I really value the fact that Accenture embraces the idea of diversity. I can come in to work and just be 100% me, the quirky ambivert version of Chelsea, and there's no judgments of that. I love the fact that you don't necessarily need to have a technology degree in order to start at a company.

There's no boundaries in terms of what you are capable of, and there's no gender in tech. It's more about you as a person and should be like that. If you love what you do, just go for it.
